

W^r Macpherson presents his Compliments to Miss Grace Phillipps. He has taken the Liberty to send her a few trifles, by the Lancaster Wagon, which began its slow progress, to the West, near a week ago. The small box, in which they are inclosed, is placed, in another addressed to Miss Phillipps; whom W^r Macpherson has constituted first lady of the treasury, or rather treasure sent; and she is to take whatever else is, in the Box, as the fees and perquisites of her new office.

Among other things of equal value, W^r M. has sent to Miss Grace Phillipps, a repository; or, according to its vulgar name - a memorandum Book, principally designed, for recording the names of those Cornish and Devonshire Squires, who will very soon pay their devotion, at her shrine. W^r M. hopes, that, for the sake of such of them, as must be unfortunate she will reserve a corner, to put her in mind of writing answers to their supplications, even when they are not approved.

W^r M. trusts, that Miss Grace Phillipps will use her best endeavours, in sending a worthy successor, to Sir John Coghill, as representative, for the ancient Borough of Newport, in which she has so much influence. Let him possess the good qualities of all his colleagues, in both Boroughs. The dignity of

JAMES MACPHERSON.

of Sir John Miller, the grace of Lord Arden and the political talents of Mr. Rose. Let him, at all events, be unlike the awkward member for Camelford, whom she has lately seen.

Mr. M. has only further to request, that Miss Grace Phillipps, will present, on a proper occa: sion, his humble respects to Miss Phillipps;
and that she will lay her commands upon him,
in whatever he can be of service, in this great town.

London Dec. 1st 1785.

Faint handwritten text, possibly a signature or list of names, oriented vertically.

Faint handwritten text, possibly a signature or list of names, oriented horizontally.

Faint handwritten text, possibly a signature or list of names, oriented horizontally.

Miss Grace Phillips

Mr. Richardson
Boston, Mass.
1785
June 2nd

Mr. Maclean
Boston, Mass.